Food Shopper

Food history is made each night as you sit down to supper. History made of small things, such as preferring skim milk or leanmeat or easy to prepare foods like frozen french fries. Through the years these "little things" have made dramatic changes in what we consume. After all in 1928 food stores carried approximately 800 items compared to over 8,000 carried today.

Flip the calendar back to 1930 and sit down for a meal, or look in the refrigerator or ice box for a clue to what's for dinner. You may be more impressed by what you don't see rather than what you see.

To begin with there's no frozen orange juice and margarine hasn't caught on yet. Then of course there's no canned baby food, no forzen vegetables and no sherbet. Unless it's a Sunday there probably isn't any chicken. Back then chicken was pretty much a Sunday treat.

The odds are a 50-50 chance of being served prk. it accounts for half of per capita meat consumption. And you have a 90½ chance of being served butter rather than margarine. You also have a 70½ chance of being served fresh, or home prepared fruits and vegetables rather than commercially processes ones. In fact, frozen foods won't be on the market much before the 1940's. It will be the mid 1950's before the use of precessed fruits and vegetables surpasses fresh use.

One of the biggest major changes over the years has been meat consumption with beef leading all others. But on the whole the average U.S. citizen over the years has increased his consumption of meat and poultry, processed fruits and vegetables, margarine and salad and cooking oils. On the other hand consumers have cut down on dairy and cereal products, coffee, and potatoes.

Changes in diet are due to many things. Take price, that's one of the major reasons why poultry has taken wing and consumption has more than doubled in the past 40 years.

In our busy on-the-go schedule convenience foods have found their slot. Frozen, canned, freeze-dried foods all offer excellent choices for people who want to spend less time in the kitchen. Potato items come in frozen french fries, instant, hash browns, au gratin all with time saving directions.

A few other factors such as: weight watching, lighter breakfasts, rising incomes, and changes in living and working conditions have contributed to dietary change.

Now in 1974 when you open the refrigerator compare all the items in it to the days of 1930. One can't help but address the food industry with the following often used quote. "You've come a long way, baby."

Better Auto Insurance For Less Money Under Federal No-Fault Bill

Virginia motorists would enjoy the benefits of a faster, fairer, and more efficient system of auto insurance and still save money on premiums under no-fault legislation now pending before Congress.

According to a recent federally-funded study, the average Virginia motorist would pay 5 per cent less for his personal injury auto insurance under the national standards no-fault law. The law would not affect the costs of auto damage insurance. But even those motorists who buy a full package of personal injury and auto damage insurance would have a saving of 2 per cent on their total auto insurance premium. Statewide, the savings would total $7,822,840.

These reductions in the price of auto insurance were forecast by the actuarial consulting firm of Milliman & Robertson in a study prepared for the U.S. Department of Transportation.

The study showed that S.354, the National No-Fault Motor Vehicle Insurance Act, would produce insurance premium savings in all 50 states.

"This definitive study of the cost implications of no-fault will end the overall auto insurance costs," said Gary R. Frink, Executive Director of the National Committee for Effective No-Fault. The National Committee is made up of consumer, labor, and automotive and insurance members and affiliates supporting national standards for no-fault auto insurance.

"The study also makes it clear that the key to cost savings in a system that pays ALL accident victims without regard to fault is the elimination of lawsuits in cases of minor injury," Frink said. "!. this bill, which will give auto accident victims all benefits while lowering their auto insurance costs. is to pass, Virginia citizens must urge their U.S. Senators and Representatives to vote for it now, in its present form."

The national no-fault bill encourages states to enact compulsory auto insurance laws providing personal injury benefits to all accident vistims from their own insurers without regard to fault; personal injury lawsuits would be allowed only in serious injury or death cases.

Lawsuits for vehicle damage would not be affected.

If the state legislature enacted a no-fault law complying with the federal bill's minimum benefit standards (unlimited medical, hospital and rehabilitation coverage;

$15,000 per person in wage loss protection: a year's household replacement services coverage at $15 a day; and $5,000 in survivors' benefits (and restricting lawsuits for "Pain and suffering" to cases involving death, serious injury or more than six months' total disability, the study said, the following premium reductions would result:

• on the personal injury coverages only (bodily injury liability, medical payments, and uninsured motorists), savings for the average insured vehicle would be 5 per cent.

•since the bill does not affect auto damage coverages, savings on the total insurance premium paid for the average insured vehicle would be somewhat less, or 2 per cent.

The study noted that the premium savings will vary considerably according to the type of vehicle insured and the rating classification and territory involve. Generally, urban areas of the state would experience results that are more favorable than the average, and rural areas results that are less favorable.

And that includes fall panicum. A growing grass problem that straight atrazine users haven't been controlling.
Fact is, Lasso plus atrazine is an excellent all-round herbicide treatment for corn growers in the North Carolina and Virginia area.
Why? Because Lasso plus atrazine goes to work on grasses as well as broadleaf weeds. Not just fall panicum, but other tough customers like smooth crabgrass, foxtails, pigweed, and smartweed.
Why, it even reduces competition from toughies like cocklebur and annual morningglory.
And except for sweet corn, you can save yourself a trip over the field by adding liquid fertilizer to your Lasso plus atrazine tank-mix.
Another thing that makes Lasso plus atrazine fit in with your grow operation is the way it minimizes the risk of carryover. You see, Lasso has no carryover. And since you use less atrazine in the tank mix, there's less chance of having carryover problems.
This year, put Lasso plus atrazine to work in your corn. You'll control fall panicum, crabgrass and other annual grasses missed by atrazine. As well as most annual broadleaf weeds.

Paintings

BLACKSBURG– "The moment an artist finishes a painting it begins to age," said Katherine L. Habel, assistant professor of clothing, textiles and related art at Virginia Tech.

"Depending on the quality, combinations and nature of the materials which have gone into its structure, a painting will age normally or abnormally," she added, "But it never the less ages."

"Its materials go through a drying process," said Ms. Habel, also an Extension specialist in home furnishings. "In the beginning, as it dries, oxygen is absorbed from the air, increasing the weight of the upper layers of paint."

As the paining continues to dry, it looses weight, and shrinkage will pull apart the paint film, causing cracks to appear.

"If the painting has been well-constructed and the artist has used sound materials in his procedures these changes are not extreme in their effects and the painting does not suffer in appearance," she continued.

Small cracks may catch dirt, but a superficial cleaning will, in many cases, eliminate the disfiguring effects. Pressure on either side of a painting can cause cracking. "For example, a chalk number put on the back of one painting about 150 years ago caused the paint to flake off the front of the painting in the exact form of the number," commented Ms. Habel.

Accidental wetting of the canvas or pasting labels on the back can also cause cracks. "A sharp blow on the painted surface will inevitably leave a mark," observed MS. Habel.

Different levels of humidity and temperature will also adverse effects. Change from one environment to another can result in a faded and cracked picture.

"Most canvas paintings of any age have passed through the hands of at least one restorer. As time goes on materials used to make former repairs wear out and even alter so much that they act to force apart what they were intended to hold together," noted Ms. Habel.

Photography is one of the most important aids in recording the condition of a painting. "So few of us can recall accurately what a picture looked like before it was changes in any way be treatment. Sometimes it points up how far a deterioration has progressed," explained Ms. Habel.

Drug Abuse Control Advisory Committee Holds Meeting

Regional efforts are being coordinated in the Central Virginia Planning District for the area of Drug Abuse Control with the formation of a Drug Abuse Control Advisory Committee.

The group, consisting of representatives from the six jurisdictions of the CVPC, met for the first time on Wednesday, April 10. Mrs. Edwin Dovel of Lynchburg was elected Chairman and Vincent Hudgins of Lynchburg Community Action Group was elected Vice-Chairman.

Mrs. Anne Kerr represents the Appomattox County Board of Supervisors on the Committee.

Representatives on the Advisory Committee consists of persons having interests and expertise in legal, health, mental health, law enforcement, social services, education, rehabilitation, business and industry, in addition to community leaders and private citizens.

Initial action of the Committee will be to define the extent of drug abuse in the CVPD and then work toward recommendations for dealing with it.

A Regional Comprehensive Drug Abuse Control Plan will be formulated by the Central Virginia Planning District Commission's Drug Abuse Control Planner, L. T. Townes, with the assistance of the Advisory Committee.

THERE ARE EXCEPTIONS

Of course there are exceptions to the pattern of rising prices. One example is eggs, which have been coming down in price since January. They are now being advertised in weekend specials also.

The poultry market is an excellent example of lower prices. Chickens are close to the price of a year ago, but less than what was paid last August and September. Turkey prices are down and in heavy supply. Many retailers are having holiday promotion with prices that match last year's prices.

By planting more acres for winter harvest growers have managed to keep retail fresh vegetable prices comparable to last winter. Lettuce, carrots, celery and onions have been priced lower than last winter.
